

Routs 3 Holdups With Tear Gas

Mrs. Ray Brennan Puts Tough Bandits to Flight And Effects Their Capture

Quick thinking of a holdup victim and the discharge of a tear gas bomb resulted in the capture of three notorious holdups shortly after the crime was committed Monday morning.

About 9 o'clock that morning, Mrs. Ray Brennan, wife of the owner of Brennan's Gable at 159th street and Keane avenue was alone in the place when three armed bandits invaded the place. Two of the bandits seized a slot machine while the third bandit watched Mrs. Brennan. As the hold-up was in progress, Wm. Stockman of Tinley Park walked in. He was covered at once. The bandits, two middle aged men and a younger man backed out of the door when Mrs. Brennan with rare presence of mind grabbed and discharged a handy tear gas bomb at the bandits. They were not only surprised, but were blinded by the tear gas. They fired one shot, the bullet going through a wall and across an adjoining room and imbedded itself in a two by four in the opposite wall.

The county highway police at Homewood were called. As the bandits drove away in an Oldsmobile with white wall tires they headed down 159th street. A good description of the bandits and their rather outstanding car was given the officers. Justice of the Peace, Louis Raschke who is located across the street from the Brennan place saw what had happened and called the state highway police.

The officers intercepted the bandits car at 159th and Central avenue about four miles east of Keane ave. The officers had blocked 159th by pulling their car across the road. One of the officers armed with a gun covered the bandits car while the other officers forced the bandits to get out of the car with their hands up. It is said that one of the bandits was so groggy from the tear gas that he could not get out of the car.

The bandits denied the holdup and no guns were found. The bandits were locked up at Harvey. Later the car was searched again and two guns were found hidden in secret compartments concealed underneath two cigarette lighters.

All three bandits are notorious criminals and have long criminal records. One of the gang has served time in Leavenworth and another has just jumped a $10,000 bail bond. The criminals are all from Chicago and have been held in bonds of $25,000 each.

Mr. Brennan is a Justice of the Peace in Orland township.

FAKE STOVE AGENT WORKS GAME AT TINLEY

A clever swindler fleeced an old resident of Tinley Park out of $10 Tuesday afternoon. The suave stranger appeared at the home of Mrs. Wm. Huhnstock, over 80 years old and represented himself to be a stove repair man. Seeing a kitchen stove manufactured by Moore Bros., Stove Works of Joliet, he said the company had a list of all the owners of stoves made by them and inasmuch as the company was quitting business he was going around to check up on the stoves to see if they were in need of repairs and said he would make the repairs or furnish the needed parts. Mrs. Huhnstock has a Moore Brothers cook stove which is in need of repairs. The stranger looked the stove over and said he could repair it. Mrs. Huhnstock said she did not want him to repair the stove as she could get the repairs thru Mr. J. C. Funk at Tinley Park, but the stranger would not listen to this. He went out to a car and came in with a package of cement which he applied to a burned out lining instead of supplying a new part. He applied the cement to the lining and to a partly burned out front grate.

He made out a bill for $11.82 on a blank statement head. Mrs. Huhnstock refused to pay the bill and threatened to call the police. The stranger said if she did not pay the bill he would turn it in for collection and it would cost her more. Being alone and anxious to get rid of the stranger, Mrs. Huhnstock finally got the so-called stove agent to settle the bill for $10.

The stranger quickly departed. A short time later the daughter of Mrs. Huhnstock came home and when her mother told her what had happened, she called Mr. Funk and told him. Nothing further has been heard of the fake stove agent.

Beware of all strangers and if alone keep your doors locked.

Bandits Shoot Bar Keeper In Holdup

Last Saturday night the Gibbons Road House at Gosselville was visited by holdup men. Three armed men held up the place and when the bar keeper sought refuge in an indoor toilet one of the holdup men fired thru the door and the bullet hit the bar keeper in the arm. The robbers escaped, but whether they secured any loot is not known.

NELLIE BLY LOSES IN MUCH ADVERTISED SUIT

Mokena's famous breach of promise suit as depicted in the play "The Trial of the Century" a Laurel Production Company of Chicago offering as sponsored by "The Woman's Church" of the St. John Evangelical church in the parlors of the church on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week, drew capacity houses on both nights. The stars of the play were Leon F. Tonn well known resident of Mokena who was "sued" for breach of promise by the mysterious Nellie Bly. The question which created a real suspense was "Who is Nellie Bly?" Wm. Lowe took the part of the mysterious lady Tuesday evening and Walter Schoeneck impersonated the same character on Wednesday night. The entire cast with the exception of the attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant was composed of local talent. The parts of the attorneys were ably carried out by Miss Ruby Jayne Ryden as counsel for the plaintiff and Miss LaFontaine Lust, who represented the defendant. Both these young ladies are connected with the Laurel Production Company and were in charge of the publicity and advertising end of the production.

Judge John F. Schultz took the part of the judge, Charles Erickson was the court clerk and Don C. Hall, Jr. was the bailiff.

The jury and spectators were all made up of local talent. The play afforded many laughs at the silly situations portrayed. The play was well acted both nights and was very well attended.

Move to Make S. W. Highway National Road Launched

A meeting of the Orland Park unit of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce was held in the Legion Hall in Orland Park Saturday night. John G. Loebe served as chairman and Wm. Semmler as temporary secretary.

Dr. W. R. Schussler gave an outline of the program now on foot to interest the Federal government in making the Southwest Highway a Federal highway and to have the government complete the paving of the gaps on this highway from Marley to Brownsville, Texas, by placing this highway on the public works program. Dr. Schussler stated that Harold Ickes who is in charge of the government's three billion dollars public works fund is favorable to the Southwest highway project, but the governor of each state thru which the highway runs, would have to endorse and recommend the project to the government. Efforts are being made now to secure a conference on this matter.

Rep. Michael Henneberry of Will County was also present and gave an address in which he pledged his support to aid in having the Southwest Highway made a national highway. The distance from Chicago to Brownsville, Texas would be reduced from 1500 miles to 1200 miles by having the Southwest highway made a national highway traversing five states. Literature outlining the benefits of the Southwest Highway has been prepared and is being forwarded to various chambers of commerce along the proposed route urging them to interest their senators, representatives and governors in the project.

Resolutions were passed asking the committee on streets and alleys of the city council of Chicago to have the Southwest Highway properly marked in the city limits and that the state highway department mark this highway from the city limits to 143rd street.

Resolutions were passed asking the Wabash railroad to provide better suburban service from Orland Park to Chicago. Another resolution favored the light alderman Sutton is making in Chicago, and the resolution in question favored the formation of a consumers protective bureau.

Among other speakers of the evening were Mayor Veronda of Essex, Eugene Hoerrman of Manhattan, Edward J. Cowan, Postmaster A. J. Toelle of Orland Park. It was decided to hold the annual meeting of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce at Manhattan the second Saturday in December.

Tinley Triangle Club Plays To Capacity Houses

Tinley Park's big moment was last Friday and Saturday nights when the Tinley Park Triangle Club presented their three act farce comedy "Here Comes Charlie" to capacity crowds at the Tinley Park school auditorium.

Pearl Boldt (Charlie) and Stan Mager (Uncle Aleck Twigg) stole the show. The two quaint mountain hill-billies and star troupers had customers all but falling in the aisles with laughter and hysterics.

Others in the fine supported cast were: Dorothy Goebel as Nora, the fidgety Irish cook; Al Meyer as officer Tim McGrill; Harry Uthe's under study, Mildred Nielsen, Mrs. Fanny Farham, conspiring but always repulsive; Doc Bruening, as Larry Elliott, romantic bachelor who always gets serious in plays only; Henry Boldt as Ted Hartley, a college pal, whose main difficulty was proposing to Charlie. Bernetta Wannemacher as Vivian, was sweet, stunning, but oh so intriguing. Adeline Glogwartz as Mrs. Caroline Synthe-Kersey of nobility and high social standing sure put on the ritz with her lorgnette or was it opera glasses Charlie? Dick Swisher handled the part of Mortimer Smythe-Kersey cleverly, "Oh its so boring, by jove."

Mrs. Trudie Noehring Swisher, the director was presented with a gorgeous bouquet of tea roses at the Saturday night performance and received a great ovation for her splendid work in directing the play. The scenery and costumes were excellent. We doff our hats to Marcus Klepper the business manager, for his untiring work in advertising the play.

Wm. Schmaedeke So. Cook County Resident 80 Yrs. Dies

Death last week claimed one of the oldest of South Cook County settlers. William Schmaedeke, who was born eighty years ago on a farm where the Oak Forest Infirmary now stands, died last Wednesday afternoon in his home in Matteson.

A resident in the south suburban section throughout his long life, Mr. Schmaedeke was well known among the older people of Bloom and Thornton Townships. Many who had known him for more than half a century were sorrowed to hear of his death. He had been in ill health for months and had been inactive since he retired and settled in Matteson several years ago.

Born of a farming family, Mr. Schmaedeke followed that vocation for most of his life. Prior to coming to Matteson he operated a farm for many years on Cicero avenue near One Hundred and Eighty-third street. Since the death in 1928 of his wife, the former Eliza Funk, whom he married forty-eight years ago, he and son Edward had lived with him at the home in Matteson.

Other survivors include two sons, Alfred and Rudolph; two daughters, Mrs. Louis Carson and Mrs. Henry Kruse; an older brother, Henry who lives in Olympia Fields and a younger sister, Mrs. William Kohlman of Tinley Park.

Rites were held Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home and then to Zion Lutheran church in Matteson. The body was interred at the Matteson cemetery. Pall bearers included six nephews: Geo. Kohlman, Theodore Schmaedeke, Theodore Rathe, Ed. Funk, J. C. Funk and Henry Henke.

TRUCK DRIVER KILLED IN CICERO AVE. M. C. CRASH

The Michigan Central railroad appears to be the victim of the jinx. Another truck was hit and the driver killed Tuesday night when a fast freight train struck the truck being driven by Edward Leader, a florist of Danville, at the Cicero avenue crossing a few miles east of Frankfort. The truck driver was instantly killed. The truck wreckage caught fire, but Leader's body was pulled out in time to prevent it from being burned.

The Cicero avenue crossing is protected with electric flashers and it is not known what caused Leader to drive in front of the freight train.

About two weeks ago a similar accident occurred on the crossing near the Michigan Central depot in Frankfort when George Mitchell was hit and killed by a fast freight.

Orland Divided on Location of S. W. Highway Route

The much discussed question of where to locate the Southwest Highway thru Orland Park is still as far from a settlement as ever.

According to Dr. W. R. Schussler of Orland Park he attended a meeting of the Cook County Board one day last week at which the Commissioners with the exception of Commissioner Wm. Busse, voted to route the Southwest Highway in the rear of the Orland school site, thence across 143rd street a short distance west of the Christ Lutheran church, thence southwest to the Wabash and thence parallel the railroad right of way to Alpine and then connect with Wolf road and the section of the Southwest highway already built into Will County.

Opposition to this route has arisen and it is contended it would be too close to the public school and the Christ Lutheran school and would be too dangerous for school children.

The opponents want the road to go straight thru Orland Park.

ILLINOIS STATE NEWS

Governor Horner ordered Director Kingery of the department of public works and State Highway Engineer Lieberman to proceed with full speed in the preparation of designs and specifications for the construction of an elevated highway system in Chicago.

By a vote of 38 to 5, the Illinois senate concurred in house amendments to senate bills 4 and 5, a part of the governor's $30,000,000 relief bond issue program. The bills, six in number, went to the governor for his consideration. The action of the senate disposed of the relief program which had passed the house by the vote of 103 to 45. There was no debate over the amendments, the motion to concur was made by President Pro Tem R. V. Graham, and the roll call followed. The senate also concurred in house amendments to Senator Martin Carlson's bill, giving downstate municipalities authority to construct swimming pools.

Cecil Freeman of Paris, thirty-six, was decapitated when a circular saw burst as he was sawing wood.

Three bandits held up a bank in Osceola and escaped with $1,500 in cash.

Perry I. Smithers, Wilmette, was elected president of the University of Illinois' Dad's association.

Jack Dean, fifty years old, of Chicago, was found guilty of complicity in the $200 robbery of the Farmers' State bank of Millbrook by a jury in the circuit court at Yorkville.

The Dewey Dry Goods company of Canton was closed by court order. Established in 1849, the store had been in business continuously. Five Chicago concerns were creditors.

Illinois waterway history is being made so rapidly that engineers say the removal of the last serious obstruction to navigation on the Illinois river is in sight. The important developments are three in number. The big new cantilever bridge at Ottawa was dedicated and the removal of the old bridge celebrated with speeches and Indian war whoops. The other two advances were recorded as the result of activity by United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green to force the removal of the old bridge at Morris and to compel the raising of the center span of a railroad bridge at Seneca. Both efforts were successful.

Circuit Judge Hugo M. Friend of Chicago dismissed, for want of jurisdiction, the bill by which Attorney General Kerner sought to recover from Len Small, former governor and state treasurer, additional payments of interest on public funds which Small withheld while he was treasurer.

Like the Canadian Northwest Mounted, Thomas Moos of Lincoln got his man. Held up, bound with baling wire, gagged and then threatened with torture because his pockets yielded only $12.85, Moos and his companion, Jack McDermott, who suffered the same treatment, managed to free themselves a short time later. Then Moos started on his Sherlock Holmes career. He visited the transient hangouts in several central Illinois towns before reaching Mason City. It was there he pointed out Alfred Rebaldo, twenty-three, of Herman, Pa., and James Howard, seventeen, of Shawnee, Okla., and told Chief of Police Sievers to arrest them. They admitted their guilt, returned his $12.85. They are prisoners in the Logan county jail.

John Olsson, seventy-six, a veteran of the Indian wars, died at his home in St. Charles. He is survived by the widow, a son, Elbert, and two stepdaughters, Mrs. Gust Orrin, of St. Charles, and Mrs. Hilda Johnson, Akley, Minn. Mr. Olsson enlisted in Company I, Twentieth infantry in November, 1882, and served until 1887. After his discharge he re-enlisted in Company F, Sixth infantry, and served until 1890. He saw service against Indians in the Dakotas, Minnesota and New Mexico.

Attorneys for the federal public works administration rejected the application of the Sanitary District of Chicago for a loan of $120,000,000 for a six-year construction program, and stated that anything over two years would not be considered.

Arno B. Cammerer, director of national parks, said considerable work has been accomplished toward the beautification of the Pere Marquette, Starved Rock, and Giant City parks in Illinois by men in the CCC camps. In Giant City park, noted for its extraordinary rock formations, the north entrance has been widened. The road into the park has been improved. A fire lane entirely surrounding the wooded portion of the park in Jackson county has been completed. Several acres of ground were cleared of dead wood and brush, he said. A new 50-foot span bridge just inside the north entrance, is nearly completed. Starved Rock, the largest of Illinois' state parks, has had its system of trails considerably extended through the work of CCC men.

Mrs. Viola Nahrang, sixty-four, of Moline, was granted a divorce on grounds of cruelty from Louis Nahrang, eighty-four. However, the court ordered her to pay her ex-husband $5 a week alimony. Mr. Nahrang originally filed the divorce bill, charging cruelty, but his ex-wife filed a cross bill recently.

Eight miners were imprisoned for several hours in Moweaqua coal mine when a squeeze caught and held the cage in which they were descending, but were later released. The mishap will delay the mine opening for three more weeks.

To Destroy Submarines From Air

THE British royal air force has developed a flying boat that is expected to destroy submarines, for it will carry the quick fire gun here illustrated. The gun fires 1½ pound projectiles at the rate of 100 rounds a minute with an effective range of 1,500 yards. It is mounted on a rotary turret in the forward cockpit of the plane. How the heavy recoil of the gun is absorbed is the secret of the air force.

JERRY PLANS A HOUSE FOR REDDY

AS REDDY FOX trotted away in the moonlight with never a glance back at the Smiling Pool and Jerry Muskrat he grinned. "He almost forgot himself," he muttered. "In another minute he would have been out on the bank. If he had he would have been in my stomach by this time." Reddy chuckled. "I wonder how he came to wake up so suddenly. Well, I don't mind. I didn't expect to get 'im the very first time. I'll call a few times and after a while he'll forget all about who I am."

Promptly at the appointed time the next evening Reddy appeared on the bank of the Smiling Pool. From the shadow of the Big Rock Jerry Muskrat was watching him. He tried to make himself think he wasn't watching for Reddy, but he was. And if Reddy hadn't come Jerry would have been disappointed. As it was he swam out quite as if he was on his way to the entrance of the Laughing Brook.

"He Almost Forgot Himself," He Muttered.

"Have you got my new house all planned for me?" asked Reddy softly.

Jerry stopped swimming and glanced toward the bank where Reddy sat. He was looking just as handsome and just as pleasant as he had on the night before. Jerry wouldn't have had Reddy know it for the world, but he had thought of little else but that house since Reddy had left the night before. You know Jerry dearly loves house-building and planning.

"I've thought about it a little," he confessed. "Of course you know my house hasn't any entrance except from underneath by way of a tunnel and that is what makes it so safe," he continued.

Reddy nodded. "I know," said he. "but of course my house, being on dry land, will have to have an entrance in the side."

"No, it won't!" cried Jerry Muskrat, drifting in close to the bank. "No, it won't! A doorway in the side would let the cold air in and make it too cold for comfort. Besides, any one who came by could stick his head in. You can have your entrance from a tunnel just the same as I do, only your tunnel will be wholly in the ground and not under water!"

Jerry was getting excited as he talked, and he drifted nearer and nearer the bank. "You have an underground house now, haven't you?" he went on.

Reddy nodded. "I certainly have, and it's a good one," he replied.

"Then all you've got to do is to dig a tunnel from that up to the new house we will build, and there you are!" cried Jerry triumphantly.

"Jerry, you certainly are a wonder!" cried Reddy, pretending to be lost in admiration. "I never, never in the world would have thought of that. No sir, I never would. I notice that you said the house that 'we' will build. I'm so glad you've decided to help me. I can't tell you how grateful I am."

"But I didn't say I would help you build it!" cried Jerry, backing away in sudden alarm. "I meant that I would help with the plans, and by telling you how."

"Of course," replied Reddy. "How stupid of me not to understand. Now what do you suggest I build that house of?"

Jerry drifted nearer before he replied.

WHAT HE IS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MAN will be judged by what he is. Not what he has. Each coin of his. If riches are his only goal, May make him poorer in his soul.

If he shall prize

Alone the things

That money buys

Or money brings,

He may be poorer far than those

Who still find pleasure in a rose.

Unless that pleasure has remained,

More he has lost than he has gained.

Man will be judged by what's within, Not what he wears. An act of sin Makes rags of riches. Deeds of good Make rich the poorest brother's hood.

The world thinks more

Of wealth, of style,

But only for

A little while,

And then decides the soul to scan,

Judge not the make-up, but the man.

What clothes he wears, what fortune his,

Man will be judged by what he is.

THREE GOOD THINGS

WHEN troubled as to what to serve for the Sunday night supper, try:

Supper Dish.

Take one cupful of grated cheese, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, one-half tablespoonful of butter, two cupfuls of milk and one egg well beaten. Melt the butter, add the milk and crumbs, and when hot add the cheese. When the cheese is melted add salt and pepper and stir in the well beaten egg. Season with a dash of cayenne and mustard and serve on toast.

Date Puff.

Beat six egg yolks and add one cupful of powdered sugar, one-half cupful of walnut meats cut up, one-half package of dates cut fine, one-half cupful of fine bread crumbs to which one teaspoonful of baking powder has been added. Mix all together and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a slow oven for half an hour. Serve with whipped cream topped with a maraschino cherry.

Meat Stew.

Cut one and one-half pounds of veal or beef into small pieces. Sear well in hot suet fat. Remove from the fat into a kettle and cover with boiling water. As soon as boiling begins lower the heat and cook slowly until the meat begins to get tender. Then add three potatoes, peeled and cubed, and when the potatoes are nearly done pour all into a deep oblong pan. Reserve a little of the liquid for gravy. Cover the top with sour cream biscuit, leaving spaces between for the steam to escape. Bake in a hot oven and serve with the gravy.

STEWART MAIDEN'S SHORT DITCH SHOT. CLUB FACE OPEN. FOR PITCH AND RUN. CLUB FACE CLOSED.

SHORT SHOTS TO THE GREEN

ON SHORT shots where the yardage to be traversed is around 30 to 50 yards with traps ahead, a pitch shot is needed. Due to the brevity of the distance one is unable to hit hard enough to obtain backspin and a sidespin has to be employed to bring the ball to a stop quickly. Stewart Maiden's method of playing this shot is to have the ball opposite the left foot and avoid a too liberal turn of the hips so that the club will not travel too much inside the line of play. The toe of the club, as illustrated above, is turned to the right slightly which opens up the blade and this comes onto the ball from the outside on the downstroke. The spin thus applied will bring the ball to a stop quickly. On occasions where a pitch and run shot is desired, no bunkers looming immediately ahead, the ball is played off the right foot and club face closed. Here the hip turn is greater with the hands inside the imaginary line to the hole.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

Chicago Children See Their First Cow

INQUIRY brought out the fact that most of the children in the Wentworth school in Chicago never had seen a cow. So Dr. Lloyd Buckhardt of the University of Illinois escorted a real live cow and her calf to the school yard and the children learned about the source of the milk they drink. Some of them were skeptical and were given the chance of milking the cow themselves, whereupon all their doubts vanished.

They Gave Us Our Thanksgiving Holiday

Sarah Josepha Hale

"Home for Thanksgiving"

from a Currier & Ives Print

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SK ten Americans "Why do we celebrate Thanksgiving on the last Thursday in November?" and nine of them probably will answer "Why, that's because the Pilgrim Fathers who established it celebrated it then." And that, like so many of our "popular beliefs," is only a half-truth, at best. It's true that the Pilgrim Fathers were principally responsible for Thanksgiving day being a red-letter day on our calendars. But it's also true that we owe the establishment of Thanksgiving day as a national holiday on a certain date (certain to the extent that it always occurs on the last Thursday in November) mainly to two persons, a man and a woman, to Abraham Lincoln and Sarah Josepha Hale.

But before discussing their part in the matter of establishing this popular national holiday, let's check up a bit on the history of the development of Thanksgiving. The story of the first New England Thanksgiving, from which our present-day celebration is a direct descendant, is familiar to all Americans—how that first winter of the Pilgrims in America had been a terrible one of cold and sickness which had left only 55 of the little company of 101 alive when the spring of 1621 came around, how all through the summer they watched with the greatest anxiety the progress of the crops they had sown, and how when autumn came there was a bountiful harvest.

Then, according to Mourt's "Relation, or Journal of the Plantation at Plymouth": "Our harvest being gotten in, our Gouverneur sent four men on fowling, that so we might after a more special manner rejoice together, after we had gathered the fruit of our labours; they four in one day killed as much fowle, as with a little helpe besides, served the Company almost a week, at which time amongst other Recreations, we exercised our Armes, many of the Indians coming amongst us, and amongst the rest their greatest King Massasoyt, with some ninety men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted, and they went out and killed five Deere, which they brought to the Plantation and bestowed on our Gouverneur, and upon the Captaine, and others."

The popular view is that this "first Thanksgiving" was the beginning of a series of such celebrations every year. But the fact is that the following year, 1622, no such observance occurred. In 1623 a day of thanksgiving was held but not in the autumn and not in connection with the harvest. It was observed on July 30 and had to do with the safe arrival of a shipload of provisions from England.

From then on for decades Thanksgiving was observed in most irregular fashion. Some years were skipped; some years had more than one celebration—sometimes for the arrival of ships, more often for victory over the Indians, as in the instance of quelling the Pequots in 1637 and the defeat of King Philip in 1676. It was not until 1689 that the Massachusetts general court issued the first recorded formal Thanksgiving proclamation.

During the Revolutionary war the people and the army observed an annual Thanksgiving day by proclamation of the Continental congress, but after peace was declared it was discontinued until 1789.

In that year a new element came into the observance of Thanksgiving and one which has survived in the present celebration. That was the Presidential proclamation of a Thanksgiving day for the whole nation and it was George Washington, the first President, who issued such a proclamation setting aside Thursday, November 26, 1789, as the day.

It so happened that Thursday, November 26, 1789, was the last Thursday in November that year and that fact was to have an important bearing on the later history of Thanksgiving day, as we shall see farther on in this article.

But although Washington was the first to issue a Presidential proclamation for a national Thanksgiving day, he did not establish a precedent which was followed consistently. During his second administration, he again issued a Thanksgiving proclamation. On January 1, 1795, in Philadelphia, which was then the national capital, he called upon his fellow Americans to "set apart and observe Thursday, the nineteenth day of February next, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, and on that day to meet together and render their sincere and hearty thanks to the Great Ruler of Nations for" a long list of blessings which the country was then enjoying.

The example set by Washington was followed by his successor, John Adams, who proclaimed two Thanksgiving days during his administration—one on Wednesday, May 9, 1798, and the other on Thursday, April 25, 1799. This custom, however, was allowed to lapse during the two terms of Thomas Jefferson, but it was revived by James Madison who issued four such proclamations during his administration. The first one of these set aside the third Thursday in August of 1812, the second named the second Thursday in September, 1813, as the day; the third designated Thursday, January 12, 1814, and the fourth and last set aside the second Thursday in April, 1815.

Thus it will be seen that although Thanksgiving days by Presidential proclamation in the main picked upon Thursday as the day of the week for such an observance, the month varied greatly and there was no connection between these Thanksgiving days and the annual observance established by the Pilgrims. No other Presidents after Madison seemed to have had occasion for proclaiming a Thanksgiving day and it remained for Abraham Lincoln to resume the custom and to link up the proclaimed Thanksgiving day with the Pilgrim custom by establishing the last Thursday in November as a national feast day and a day for giving thanks.

But before adding another star to the crown of the Great Emancipator, heed now the ancient French admonition, "Cherchez la Femme!" It is here that Sarah Josepha Hale comes into the Thanksgiving picture. For it was Mrs. Hale, a native of Newport N. H., known wherever English is spoken as the author of "Mary Had a Little Lamb," editor of the famous magazine, Godey's Lady's Book, and a pioneer in educational and civic problems of her day who, by canvassing the governors of states and territories and reconciling sectional differences, and by appealing constantly to successive Presidents, brought about the establishment of Thanksgiving day as a national holiday on the last Thursday in November.

Sarah Josepha Hale was a far-sighted woman in many respects. She was the first to advocate women teachers in public schools. She demanded for housekeeping the dignity of a profession, and put the term "domestic science" into the language. She started the first day nursery, and was the first to stress the necessity of physical training for her sex, as well as the first to advocate public playgrounds. She founded the first society for the advancement of women's wages, better working conditions for women and the reduction of child labor.

As early as 1827 she began advocating a nation-wide observance of Thanksgiving day. "We have too few holidays," she wrote at that time. "Thanksgiving, like the Fourth of July, should be considered a national festival and observed by all our people . . . as an exponent of our republican institutions."

But it was not until 1846 that she began her campaign through the editorial columns of Godey's Lady's Book to hold such a nation-wide celebration on a certain date and every year from that time on she waged her campaign. Early in the spring she would write letters to the governors of all the states and territories, and to influential persons everywhere, asking their assistance in making the last Thursday in November, which had been Washington's choice, a universal holiday. In the hope of bringing pressure to bear upon the governors, she next opened correspondence with literally thousands of private persons of influence, with senators and congressmen and the clergy.

In her effort for the establishment of state Thanksgivings she was almost immediately successful. By 1849, the third year of her campaign, most states and territories were keeping individual festivals, but no attempt was made to coincide the dates—Maine might celebrate—and frequently did—in September, Virginia in October and Pennsylvania in November.

A conglomeration of state holidays, however, was not by any manner of means Sarah Hale's goal. She dreamed of the states joined in a great national observance, and to this end she soon began appealing to whoever happened to be the President in office. Using Washington's single act as a precedent and example, she privately wrote again and again to Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan, all to no avail. It was an age when women outside the home were seen and not heard. She herself at the time was the only successful business woman in the country. Feminine meddling in public affairs was not only frowned on but resented.

Mrs. Hale was quite aware of this antagonistic attitude. In one of her letters to President Fillmore, now preserved in a public collection at Buffalo, she begged his excellency not to be prejudiced against the idea because he was being addressed by a woman! He may not have been so prejudiced, but at least he did nothing about it. Neither did Pierce, his successor, nor Buchanan, who preceded Lincoln.

Failing with the Presidents, she fell back on her editorials, thus carrying her appeal again directly to the people. As early as 1832 she had succeeded in whipping 29 states and territories into line for the last Thursday of November. Each year all through the seething '50s she proclaimed in Godey's Lady's Book that that day would be Thanksgiving day, and in the main the country kept it with her. The most gigantic civil strife in the history of the world was pending, and political and sectional bitterness was rife.

In 1859, while the storm was brewing, she was more vigorous than ever with her thanksgiving plan, in hope that it might help to avert disunion. "If every state," she wrote in an editorial in Godey's, "would join in union Thanksgiving on the twenty-fourth of this month, would it not be a renewed pledge of love and loyalty to the Constitution of the United States which guarantees peace, prosperity, progress and perpetuity to our great Republic?" So in 1859 an almost universal Thanksgiving day was kept, not in response to a Presidential proclamation but because a woman asked it.

In 1861, with the smoke of battle darkening the land, Mrs. Hale begged for a "Thanksgiving Day of Peace," but there was no peace. In 1862 she again failed, but in 1863 she won—after 17 years.

It came about in this way. In the September number of Godey's she wrote: "Would it not be better that the proclamation that appoints Thursday the twenty-sixth of November (1863) as the day of Thanksgiving for the people of the United States of America should, in the first instance, emanate from the President of the Republic—to be applied by the governors of each and every state, in acquiescence with the Chief Executive advisor?"

On the twenty-ninth of September she received from Seward, Lincoln's secretary of state, an answer to her letter to the President, stating that it was receiving official attention. Four days later, Abraham Lincoln issued the first national Thanksgiving day proclamation since Washington's day. In it he said "And so . . . the last Thursday in November is hereby set apart as a day of thanksgiving and praise." That set the precedent and Lincoln followed it up the next year, 1864, by naming the same date (the last Thursday) in his second and last regular Thanksgiving day proclamation. Since that time other Presidents have never deviated from the custom, nor have governors of the states.

As for Sarah Josepha Hale, "the Mother of Thanksgiving," so long as she remained editor of Godey's Lady's Book (she resigned in December, 1877), she stood guard over her cherished holiday. Had it not been for her, in the years of civil strife and reconstruction the precedent set by Lincoln might very well have been put aside, but by the time she laid down her editorial pen, in her ninetieth year, the custom had been firmly established. Thanksgiving day had taken its place in the hearts of all the people and on the calendar of the nation for all time to come.

PAUL IN CORINTH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-17; I Cor. 1:1-2:8.
GOLDEN TEXT—For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. I Cor. 2:2.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Care at Night.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Gets New Courage.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Work With Others.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Unity in Christ.

The establishment of the church at Corinth is an example of missionary endeavor for all ages. The method employed and the message delivered which resulted in success then will result in success now.

I. The True Missionary Method (Acts 18:1-3).

Paul came to Corinth a stranger in a strange city. His method of gaining a foothold was.

1. Finding a home (v. 2). This he found with Aquila and Priscilla, who had recently been expelled from Rome. Being of the same nationality, there was a natural affinity with them.

2. Telling for daily bread (v. 3). Paul was of the same craft as his host. Every Jewish child was taught some trade by means of which he could gain his livelihood, should occasion require. Missionaries should not be above honest toil.

II. Preaching in the Synagogue at Corinth (Acts 18:4-8).

1. Compelled to toil for a living (v. 4). Though compelled to toil for a living, he did not lose sight of his main work. He reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, persuading the Jews and the Greeks.

2. His activity increased through the coming of Silas and Timothy (v. 5). This was caused by.

a. Favorable report from the church at Thessalonica. This report put new vigor into his labors.

b. They brought pecuniary gifts from the Macedonian church (Phil. 4:15; II Cor. 11:9). Being now free from the necessity of toiling for a living, he could devote more time and energy to preaching the gospel.

c. Silas and Timothy became helpers to Paul in the work.

3. Increased opposition (v. 6). Paul's increased activity met with increasing opposition.

4. Paul announces his purpose to turn to the Gentiles (v. 6). This was necessitated because of the opposition and blasphemy of the Jews.

5. Paul in the house of Justus (vv. 7, 8). He remained sufficiently near those whose hearts God had touched that they could easily find him. His success here was such that Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, was converted. Paul departed from his usual custom and baptized Crispus.

III. Paul's Vision (Acts 18:9-11).

This vision was for the purpose of giving encouragement to Paul at this time. His experiences in Europe were most trying.

1. "Be not afraid" (v. 9). The one who is doing the will of the Lord need not be afraid.

2. "Speak, and hold not thy peace" (v. 9). The one who has heard the voice of God cannot refrain from speaking.

3. "I am with thee" (v. 10). All who faithfully carry out the divine commission can be assured of the divine presence.

4. "No man shall set on thee to hurt thee" (v. 10). No harm can come to the Lord's servant until his work is done.

5. "I have much people in this city" (v. 10). The one who goes forth with the divine message can be assured that his ministry cannot fail.

IV. Party Spirit in the Corinthian Church (I Cor. 1:10-18).

In this church rival factions were contending against each other. Some were for Paul, some for Apollos, some for Peter, and some for Christ. The cause of this threatened division was failure to see the true headship of the church. Christ is the one and only Head, and the members composing his body cannot be divided. Membership and interest all center in Christ. By one Spirit all were baptized into the one body (I Cor. 12:13). Sectarianism is an evil to be deplored. The factious spirit in the church mars its testimony and retards its growth. Those who understand the oneness in Christ will be joined together in the same mind.

V. The One Supreme Message of the True Preacher (I Cor. 2:1-8).

It is Jesus Christ and him crucified. Prejudice and human limitations prevent men from seeing eye to eye. Christian unity is possible only as the members of his body grow up into Christ.

Christ Uses All

It is amazing what use Jesus makes of frail mediums. None of the Twelve appears to have been a man of outstanding position until Jesus took them and made them men of might and vision. That is what is continually happening.

Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from some synthetic, habit-forming cathartic may cause bowel strain, and even set-up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be corrected in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the bowels are moving regularly without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need.

The New Era

Claudius E. Wade, Director
Chicago College of Commerce
The sooner the American public realizes that they are on the threshold of a mighty and far-reaching sociological change, the quicker will be our economic recovery and adjustment.

Last November a few more than a million people voted for Norman Thomas because he was a socialist; approximately twenty millions voted for Franklin D. Roosevelt. Today the democratic platform is growing up to weeds while at least 75 per cent of Mr. Thomas' platform is being put into action. The country is acclaiming it enthusiastically showing they need socialism, want socialism, but they want it called something else.

Our Government has been a very democratic one. It has given the business element a chance to be fair, and they made a mess of it. It has been all for the few and nothing for the masses as evidenced by the fact that 4 per cent of the people have four-fifths of the wealth. A society with a foundation which permits a certain few to take millions and give nothing in return must undergo a change. It does not take a genius to become a millionaire today, but rather one who can, without conscious remorse, take from the helpless.

With movie stars earning many times the salary of our president, with presidents of banks and industries earning up to a million or more a year, we are forced to wonder how it is that other men giving an honest day's work can only get two or three dollars a day. If the normal income of our country was pro rated, every family would receive approximately $3000 a year.

The NRA is just beginning to cut its teeth. Big business and little business alike had better make their plans to conform to requirements. The Government has stepped deep into business and has no intention of backing up, but will assert itself more forcibly and certainly as time goes on.

ORLAND PARK SCHOOL NOTES

The Grammar Room of the Orland School held its Annual Achievement meeting on the night of November 20. A short business meeting was held followed by a brief address given by Miss McMahon, the Director of Education of Division No. 5. A very pleasing and interesting program, arranged by the different rooms was presented.

The Primary and Intermediate rooms, very cleverly portrayed Mother Goose characters in a little play-let.

A colonial school was given by the pupils of Miss Schmaedeke's room, showing schools of earlier days.

A clever little dialogue by Donald Mohr and Franklin Uthe about Johnny's mistake, was well received.

The High School presented two musical numbers "To Wild Rose" and "On the Road to Mandalay." Arthur Kimmel carried the solo part.

The Achievement Club presented a pilgrim operetta "On Plymouth Rock." The characters were: Priscilla ... Lucille Cooper John Alden ... Donald Cleveland Miles Standish ... Lester Kinney Governor Winslow Marvin Schmaedeke.

Dame Goodly

All did their parts very creditably. Following the program the parents, and friends were invited to visit the various rooms. Each room had an exhibit of the work done this year.

The Achievement Club sold candy during the evening.

The Achievement Club wish to thank Mrs. L. Arnold and Mrs. Sherman Knox for the curtains donated to the grammar room which was badly in need of them.

This Can't Go On

The convicts at Joliet Penitentiary are in a sullen mood, because they want red striped pajamas. I don't blame them for wanting to add a little color to their bed-time stories.

What-Ho! A new one in England. Automobiles carry side arms that the driver automatically pulls up in view of the other driver whenever any courtesy is shown on the road. The small arms reads: "Thank you." Any American manufacturer could make a fortune on the same thing. All he'd have to do, is change the wording on the arm to read: "Where the h-l are ya goin'."

Are you overweight? Lose a pound a day on the London Stock Exchange.

If you're troubled with insomnia the latest is to put yourself to sleep playing imaginary rounds of golf. That is, if you're a good golfer. Personally it doesn't work out for me. It took me 'til 5 o'clock yesterday morning to get out of the rough.

Thoughts for a day:- Why marry with parrots selling at $5?

As Hugh S. Johnson says, "I thought the air would be full of dead cats" when I started doing this column, but so far not one. Maybe they're looking for pole cats.

Don't suffer from dandruff. Send for a bottle of Ray Lee's Lotion, and start "Leadin' for the last roundup."

Since Hitler went in for 100 per cent Germanism a fine bootleg business in ancestors has grown up. For a "reasonable fee" usually about $60 clever men will provide anyone with documentary evidence as to who your ancestors were. Its out for two reasons. Firstly: It's a racket. Secondly: You're liable to check up and find out your ancestors worked for organ grinders.

Well nowadays it's just a case of "take it or leave it". If you take it don't turn around. You're liable to turn to a pillar of salt. Keep going, even though you turn into a greek.

Ten Reasons Why Air Travel Is Popular

Four years ago, United Air Lines experimented with stewardess service on its planes on night sections of its Coast-to-Coast flight. The idea proved popular with travelers and the original eight stewardesses have been supplemented until 160 are now required as the third member of the crew on United's fleet of three-mile-a-minute multi-motored planes.

Duties of air stewardesses, some of whom are pictured above with one of the new Boeing monoplanes, include serving lunches aloft, providing reading and writing material, checking tickets, answering questions, making night-flying passengers comfortable for sleeping, and in other ways adding to the enjoyment of plane travel.

Special Offerings of Festive Necessities

BE THANKFUL

An original poem by Trudie Noehring Swisher

We know the Pilgrims landed, in the days of long ago,
And fought their way to freedom,
That's why we loved them so.
We know of all the hardships, they patiently endured
And how they fought the red-men,
To keep their homes secure.
And yet, through all these trials,
They never forget to pray
Or ask their heavenly Father, to guide them day by day.
They taught their little children
That holiness was right
And for religious freedom was what had made them fight;
They worked with faith undying
Because their cause was just,
I wonder, if we, of today, are thankful half enough?
I wonder how we dare to pray
The kind of prayers we do.
I wonder if we are sincere, in all the things we do.
I wonder do we thank our God,
For blessing great or small,
I wonder are there some of us, who never thank at all?
Time changes things, the whole world o'er
Yet deep within each heart
There is a flame of hope, from which Not one of us should part.
'Tis just a little light of love,
Pray keep it burning bright,
And ask the blessing of your God,
To rest on you tonight.
Be thankful for that which you have,
Be glad for skies above,
There's heaven after death you know,
And God is always love.

Beer and Sandwiches

THE new 3.2 beer may not be able to stimulate you to the point of intoxication, but it certainly stimulates your appetite. That's one good thing about beer. The nations which are the greatest beer drinkers are also the heartiest eaters. In our country beer seems somehow to suggest sandwiches, so we're going to suggest some sandwiches which go well with beer.

These Go with a Thirst

Ham and Tomato Sandwich: Spread slices of bread with butter, and then spread half the slices with deviled ham from a 2 1/4-ounce can. Top each with a slice of ripe tomato, and cover with a leaf of lettuce spread with mayonnaise. Cover with rest of buttered slices of bread; cut as desired. Makes four to six whole slice sandwiches.

Deviled Ham and Cucumber Sandwiches: Spread thinly sliced white bread with butter, then with deviled ham from a 2 1/4-ounce can. Put together with thinly sliced crisp cucumber sprinkled slightly with salt. Makes four whole slice sandwiches.

Toasted Deviled Cheese Sandwiches: Spread squares or oblongs of buttered toast with deviled ham. Sprinkle thickly with grated cheese, and place under broiler flame until the cheese is melted and browned. Serve at once.

Corned Beef and Celery Sandwiches: Chop fine enough canned corn beef to make one cup. Add one-half cup finely chopped celery and one-third cup chili sauce, and spread between slices of buttered whole wheat bread. Add a leaf of lettuce, if you like. Makes ten to twelve whole slice sandwiches.

install GAS HEAT

at the new low rate

To prove that every home can now afford to heat with gas, we'll install it at our expense and remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

EVERY day you're without automatic gas heat, you miss many, many conveniences of this modern-day means of heating. You miss the luxury of getting up on chilly mornings to a warm house, the even, regulated heat that promotes the health and contentment of the entire family—and other advantages.

Why not install gas heat now and end all heating worries forever—daybreak firefixing, back-breaking coal shoveling, dirty hours of ash shaking and hauling, chopping kindling, and above all else—everlasting watching and regulating.

Every home—even the most modest—can now afford to heat with gas. Rates are one-half of what they were during the 1930-31 season.

We take the risk

Without one cent of investment by you we'll install a modern, efficient gas burner in your furnace or boiler. We pay the cost. You try gas heat one month, two months or a year. During this period you pay only $3.00 a month rental for the equipment in the average home.

But if for any reason within the first year you decide that you don't like gas heat, we'll take it out and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike order. The rental charge stops immediately.

Gold prices climb higher and higher.
When we went off the gold basis, gold was $20 and some units an ounce. Now the price is above $32. This doesn't mean that gold is worth more, only that our dollar is worth less.

The dollar being worth about 64 cents, a $1,000 American bond, formerly payable in gold, now payable in paper, is worth in the world's markets about $640.

Automobile sales indicate prosperity or the lack of it. No intelligent man would be without a car, and a good one, if he could help it. It is good news that sales of new passenger automobiles in the United States for the first nine months of 1933 were one hundred thousand units above the total sales for the twelve months of 1932.
Nine months' sales of new motor trucks also exceeded the 1932 sales.

Old automobiles are wearing out at the rate of 5,000,000 cars a year. When the time does come, there will be such a demand for cars as will amaze even the manufacturers.

Crime Marches On

An Indian Says "Please"

Under NRA rules, control of industry and business will drift more and more into control by organized labor. The unions, according to Mr. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, have about 5,000,000 members now and hope to enroll as many as 25,000,000 men. Such an organization would be the government of the United States. No other groups could stand against it.

Therefore it is important for union labor to consider, above all things, future efficiency. Since 25,000,000 enrolled union men would not be able to get more than their share of such prosperity as might exist.

The two industries that have made greatest progress in the United States, conquering competition even in foreign countries, have been open shop industries, free of union labor control—namely, the automobile industry and the moving picture industry.

They have also been the two industries paying the highest wages. In the long run only results count, and union labor, as and if it takes control of industries hitherto "open shop," will want to plan for continuance of efficiency, profits and production, otherwise the jobs will shrink. You cannot create jobs artificially, except with the United States treasury to draw on, and even that could not last forever.

While Germany with Captain Eckener and his Zeppelin shows how easy it is to fly from Germany to South America and back to Germany by dirigible, the British are pushing their heavier-than-air passenger and mail line across the Atlantic to the United States with a base at Newfoundland.

The route would be Liverpool to northern Scotland, Iceland, Greenland, Labrador, Montreal and other American and Canadian cities.

This country that invented the flying machine sits, watches and asks: "Who's afraid of the big, bad wolf?" That is a better song for 3 little pigs than for 48 big states.

We have committees to suppress crime and gangs, one established by the federal government, Senator Cope-land of New York at its head, and every big and little city, town and village has its police force. But crime goes ahead, paying no attention, well organized, using "automatics" and machine guns, as calmly as doctors write out prescriptions.

In Idaho an old Nez Perce named "Many Wounds" asks Uncle Sam to be kind enough to pay his tribe "as much gold as six mules could pull, the gold loaded upon a heavy wagon."

The government agreed to do that in 1855, when the Nez Perce made considerable concessions. Poor "Many Wounds" does not keep up with the news. He is a very old Indian, or he would know that gold is now considered too good for American white men, to say nothing of Indians.

It may interest dwellers in other cities to know that New York is flooded with fraudulent gold-mining stocks. Everybody is talking about gold, and so poor geese that usually buy real estate that they haven't seen, and stocks about which they know nothing, are again offering themselves as a sacrifice.

The British say the question of foreign debts is "up to Roosevelt." Usually when an individual nation owes money it is up to the one that owes to pay. Conditions. SOLVING ONE PROBLEM

If we so organize our educational processes that every year there will flow into the life of our nation 5,000,000 young men and women, who are educated not only in knowledge but in character and public spirit, we shall not be concerned with the problem of the criminal.—Dr. Robert Clothier, president of Rutgers university.

Do this for Your Child in TWO WEEKS

How to rid any boy or girl of sluggishness or constipation and build a big appetite. The trouble with children who will not eat is usual stasis. The symptoms are a tongue that's always coated, bad breath, poor color, dull eyes that are often a bilious yellow. No appetite, no ambition—even for play. Hard to get to sleep, hard to wake in the morning.

There's an absolute remedy for this condition. It gives listless youngsters the appetite and energies of a young animal! They eat! They gain! They keep well!

It's not the stomach, but the bowel condition that keeps children from eating. But the trouble is in the lower bowel—the colon. California syrup of figs is the only "medicine" that is needed to stimulate the colon muscles. The very next day, your child is eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and you will see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight and spirits.

Any drug store has the real California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Nature never made a nicer acting or nicer tasting laxative. (It is purely vegetable.) Remember California syrup of figs when sickness, a cold or any upset has clogged a child's bowels.

WARNING: Even when it's something to give children, some stores will try to substitute. So be sure the bottle says CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs.

"Can't see very well without my glasses." He fumbled. "Here they are. Now let's take this out where it's lighter and let me read it over once."

Doris walked briskly to the door. She was aware of a car coming up the road, but she did not think of it. The old man was reading aloud her message, getting it very slowly, it seemed to her, his ancient head bent over the familiar yellow slip of paper.

The car stopped. A man got out and came swiftly toward them. Doris looked up, stepped back in sudden fright, looked again. He stared at her.

There could be no doubt who it was. Doris felt all her old unreasoning terror sweeping over her. It was the man in the cab.

He snatched the bit of yellow paper from the old man's hand.

"For G—d's sake, don't send—" He glanced at the message and crumpled it up in his pocket. "Thank G—d I've found you."

The old man looked at the stranger calmly.

"Know this young lady, do you?"

The young man did not answer. He looked at Doris. His eyes were dark with excitement and his face was drawn.

"Girl's been trying to tell me she's Diane Merrell," said the constable. "Course I knew she wasn't."

The young man turned his gaze on the old man. "Of course she's not," he said sharply. "That's ridiculous."

CHAPTER XI

She was not Diane Merrell. Doris almost smiled. Relief loosened her nerves.

She saw the young man's dark eyes meet the constable's in a knowing glance. Slowly the old man made the motion of grinding near his own grizzled temples. He winked. He thought she was crazy.

The young man winked back.

Perhaps she was crazy. Perhaps she was an escaped lunatic. A subtle panic emanating from that dark nightmare face tore at her heart. This was the man in the cab. Why did she hate him? Why did he terrify her?

"Come, dear, let me take you home."

He put a protecting arm out to touch her shoulder.

She jerked away. Dear! There it was again. As she stepped back he came closer, whispered, "For G—d's sake come away from this old fool."

Doris turned and began to run. She ran through the tree tunnel to the place where she had hidden Beatrice's car.

The man in the cab had said she was not Diane Merrell. And the man in the cab knew. Why was she running away from him then? Because she hated him, because she feared him, because it was her instinct to run and she was behaving like a fool. Her footsteps slowed. She had lost herself once in a hopeless whirl by leaving the man in the cab. Now she must face him.

She stopped and turned around.

The young man was not pursuing. He had left the constable who had settled down for another nap under the tree.

There was a soft whirr as the young man started up his motor. She watched him back his car. He was turning around. Why was she afraid of him? If he were her husband, Rocky had said she could divorce him.

She would talk with him now. At least he could tell her who she was. She drew a long breath and waited for him to come up to her.

Her heart gave a little leap of pleasure. She was not Diane Merrell. And when she told this young man she could never belong to him no matter what their relation had been, she would be free. Then she would go back to the St. Gardens. She would go back to Rocky. The thought gave her so much courage that she smiled as the car drew up beside her.

"Get in."

She shook her head. "No. You get out."

"No. We must get away from here."

"I want to talk to you."

"We can talk better in the car."

"No. I won't do that. You'll have to get out."

He hesitated, opened the door, hesitated again and got out. "We might walk for a bit. It's risky, though."

"Why is it risky?"

"Might get caught. I guess not, though. I've been searching for you everywhere."

"How did you find me?"

"Through the papers. I came to the St. Gardens, saw you leaving just as I came from the train. I followed you up the road."

"I thought someone was following me."

"Yes. But I lost the trail up the road. What did you do with your car? Finally I saw you standing in front of the drug store." His manner changed. He caught her by the shoulders, "Oh my sweet, can you ever forgive me? You must have been through hell."

Doris clenched her hands. She straightened her shoulders and shook off his arm. The "Oh my sweet" was too much. She might as well come to the point quickly. "Look here," she said abruptly, "who are you anyway?"

He looked at her in astonishment. "What do you mean?"

"I mean what I say. What's your name?"

"Are you kidding me?"

"Absolutely not. I've lost my memory. I don't remember anything."

He stopped. His brows drew together. "But—but oh my G—d! Do you mean that? Do you mean you don't remember what happened?"

"I don't remember what happened."

He came close again. His dark, unhappy eyes pleaded with her. "But you remember George? You can't have forgotten—"

"George?"

"Don't you remember?"

"I don't remember. Are you George?"

"Darling! Darling! You've forgotten me?"

Doris drew a long angry breath. "Yes I have—but tell me about George."

"I'm George. George Mortimer."

He took off his hat and smoothed the dark wavy hair back from his brow nervously. They had walked away from the tiny village and were standing near a brook that rumbled over gray stones.

George Mortimer. The name brought back nothing at all.

"She was afraid of her next question: Who am I? He would surely answer: Mrs. George Mortimer. She looked up at him, gathered her nerve, spoke calmly: 'Who am I?'"

He seized her in his arms.

"Oh my darling, you belong to me now—"

"I don't—"

"You're all I have. We'll stick together—"

"I won't."

She struggled. "I want to get you on a boat—"

"Let me go."

"We can be in Canada by nightfall. It's a miracle—that I've found you. Darling, sweet. You're going to be all right now."

She pushed him with all her strength, shoved at his shoulders until she faced him. "Tell me who I am."

He crushed her close. "I wouldn't tell you for anything in the world. It's unbelievable that you don't know."

"There's a car coming. If you don't let go of me I'll scream murder at the top of my lungs."

He listened. The steady buzz of an approaching motor could be heard over the murmur of the brook. A car was coming up the road in a cloud of dust. Rocky's car.

"For G—d's sake, come on. We've got to get going."

"I won't go with you I tell you. Let go of me."

"You're crazy. You don't know what you're saying. You've got to come with me."

She screamed: "Rocky! Rocky!"

Rocky's car stopped. He flung himself out. The man's hold on Doris relaxed. "You fool—"

Rocky neared them. The man began to run toward his own car.

"Rocky! Don't let him go. It's the man in the cab."

Rocky looked at her over his shoulder. His jaw was set grimly. He ran after the other man, George Mortimer.

The car was a couple of yards down the road. Doris watched with clenched hands. The man in the cab was running desperately. Rocky stumbled after him.

Rocky was gaining. But George Mortimer would get to his car. He would get away. He had not told her who she was. He would disappear. She would never find out.

George Mortimer reached his car. She could see his long legs disappearing. Then his head showed dimly through the glass, bending forward. He was turning on the switch. She heard the motor.

Rocky came up to the car. He tugged at the door, could not open it. Mortimer was slipping the car into gear. Rocky put his hand through the open window and seized the man at the wheel by the collar.

The car tottered slowly forward with Rocky on the running board. George Mortimer was helplessly clutching at the wheel. He could not quite reach it. Rocky was pulling at him, trying to drag him through the window.

Doris was paralyzed. The car running slowly in first speed was wavering straight for a deep ditch. Rocky's hands were tugging at Mortimer, pulling his shoulders through the window. Mortimer's feet were away from the brakes.

Nothing could stop the car. If Rocky would only get away. The car would fall over.

The car plunged, came to an awful standstill but stood upright. Rocky braced himself against the side.

Doris ran toward them.

She saw Rocky straighten himself. He was all right, then. Mortimer's head had struck against the window frame. He was limp now in Rocky's grasp.

Rocky let go of him and opened the car door. Mortimer lay with closed eyes, a streak of blood running down his forehead.

"Rocky—is he dead?"

"I don't know."

"Rocky. I'm out of one murder. And now I've got you in another."

Rocky looked at her blankly. "What do you mean?"

"I'm not Diane Merrell."

Rocky hardly seemed to hear. He was looking at the man with whom he had been struggling. "I've got to get him to the doctor." He leaned over and bent his head over George Mortimer's head. "He's still alive. I think he's only stunned. I'll move my car up here and put him in it."

He ran back to his car. Doris examined the wound on Mortimer's head. It came from a small cut. Oh, surely he would be all right. He would come to his senses and tell them everything. The blood was already drying up. If only he weren't so pale. If only he would open his eyes.

Rocky's car came up. In a minute Rocky had hoisted him into the rumble. Rocky turned to Doris. His face was stern.

"Now, Doris. You are to do exactly as I say. You disobeyed me this morning by running off, and I don't want that to happen again."

Doris's heart throbbed happily. It was nice being with Rocky again, and nothing much mattered now. George Mortimer was going to live, and she was not Diane Merrell. "I'll do anything you say, Rocky."

"All right. Where is Beatrice's car?"

"It's parked up a lane—very near."

"Go and get in it, and drive back toward the St. Gardens place."

"But I'd rather come with you. I want to find out if this man is all right. And I want to know—"

"It's not safe."

"But I told you I'm not a fugitive from justice or anything. He's the man in the cab. He says I'm not Diane Merrell. And he knows."

"Doris, please don't argue with me. I've got something to tell you, and as soon as I get this man in a hospital, I'll come right away and join you. Now pay attention. Turn to your right on a dirt road near a yellow barn. Have you got it?"

Doris looked at him pitifully. She was not Diane Merrell, only Rocky wouldn't listen. Rocky continued: "Go up this road for about a mile. It skirts the St. Gardens place. You'll find a shed. Leave the car there, and go on into a little path. It crosses a bridge, and leads to a little yew arbor. I'll meet you there."

He had stepped into his car, and was already turning on his ignition as he finished. George Mortimer lay calm and still.

"But Rocky—please don't let him get away."

"Don't worry. Meet me in the yew arbor."

He was off without a smile. Doris watched him go. Then she walked briskly back along the road and got into Beatrice's car once more.

She drove steadily, at a slower pace than the one she had come. Even if she were Diane Merrell, Mortimer would not have given her away to an officer of the law, not if he loved her as he seemed to do. What a fool she was! Why, if she was not Diane Merrell, had he been afraid to stop on the road? Why had he whispered in her ear, "For G—d's sake come away from this old fool?"

But if she were Diane Merrell, what had George Mortimer to do with her? Why would she be riding in a cab with another man on her wedding day?

Could it be that it was only eleven o'clock? She looked at the watch on her wrist. It was five minutes of the hour. So many things had happened that morning. It seemed as if a day must have passed. She wondered what had happened to Molly. And how had Rocky found her?

This must be the shed up ahead.

The path Rocky had described was not hard to find. It led through a wood of beeches and towering pines. On either side ferns grew to a height of three feet. Rocky had said he wanted to talk to her. His face had not looked very happy. What had he found out? She left the car.

Music came tentatively from the other end of the long delphinium alley. A harp, a cello, violins were getting in readiness. Doris remembered. The wedding rehearsal. She heard the soft laugh of a girl nearby.

There was a bench in the yew arbor. She and Rocky could sit there and be unseen by the wedding party as they talked.

She crossed the greensward and sat down on the hard bench to wait for Rocky.

She heard someone coming over the rustic bridge. A minute later she saw Rocky. How tall he was, and she liked the way he moved, with long swift strides. But his face looked worried. Everything was not all right. Her heart became heavy as she looked at his drawn features. There was more trouble.

CHAPTER XII

He sat down beside her and took her hands in his. His eyes were full of an anguish that swept her instantly.

"Rocky," she said, trying to rally against the waves of depression that came from him. "Didn't you hear what I said about not being Diane Merrell?"

"There's not a doubt that you're Diane Merrell."

The reaction to all her hopes was too much. The man in the cab had said she wasn't. But she could not bring the words out. She stared despairingly back at Rocky. His jaw was set, his eyes grim. Then her body began to shake uncontrollably.

"Doris. Darling Doris. Don't feel so."

"But—"

Rocky took her left hand. He slipped the wedding ring from her finger. He looked at the inscription on the inside. H. L. V. to D. M.

Howard L. Valery to Diane Merrell! "I forgot about that," she said faintly.

"There's the luggage, too. It was rather unusual luggage, you know."

"Yes. Diane Merrell's luggage."

HOW MANY OF US GO THROUGH LIFE BLIND TO BEAUTY!

In a book called "On Being Alive," the well-known Dr. Walter Russell Bowie pleads with us to seek and appreciate the beauty around us.

"Open your eyes," says he, "and look. Make up your minds to be on the watch for something which will give you a new tang of enjoyment, something which will make you stop and say, 'I never noticed that before,' or 'I never knew it, but that really is beautiful.'"

And the author goes on to enumerate the many spectacles of exquisite beauty in country and city that are before our eyes, but by most of us unseen. What we really need, for the greater enjoyment of life and all the beauty around us, is some "Celestial Surgeon," to stab our spirits broad awake.

What vast implications are in that thought! What limitless vistas it opens in one's mind for greater peace and happiness for all of us, for life as we would all live it!

For such a Celestial Surgeon who could "stab our spirits broad awake" would make us more sensitive not only to the scenic beauty around us.

With "our spirits broad awake" our perceptions would be sharpened, too, to the beauty in the people about us. We should be able to see through surface frictions and maladjustments to the heart of people, which are usually good. With our "spirits broad awake" we should understand the unexpressed motive, the unspoken word, the caress that is held back.

With "our spirits broad awake" all the littlenesses that clutter up living would sink into their true perspective. The big things, the important things, the realities in human relationship would be ever before us—we would live gallantly, the kind of living that brings no regrets.

The Wedding March Murder

by MONTE BARRETT

A new serial that will appear in these columns

All New York society is in the church for the wedding of Doris Carmody, heiress, to Jim Franklin, candidate for governor. The wedding march starts out, the bridesmaids peel down the aisle, and then begin to falter, to mark time—the bridegroom has not appeared—an usher slips out of the vestry room, whispers to the waiting clergyman, and the wedding is called off because of an "accident." On the floor of the minister's study the best man has found Jim Franklin stabbed through the heart.

Eight persons had made their way to the minister's study before the wedding to catch the bridegroom where he couldn't evade them. Eight persons had reason to wish Jim Franklin out of the picture. Which one turned the vestry room into a scene of violence and death while the organ rolled?

Peter Cardigan, well-known writer of mystery stories and amateur detective, is among the assembled guests. You will remember him from Murder Off Stage. He is drawn immediately into the investigation. Because of his past accomplishments, the police turn to him for assistance. At peril to his life, he helps them pursue, with cumulative suspense, the supposed guilt of the eight suspects.

The reader is caught by the opening chapter and held at high tension through the brisk logical sifting of evidence to the desperate, skilfully conceived climax.

You will find it a great story

A Year for Real Thanks

If there ever was a year when we should utter devout thanksgivings, it is this year when we are emerging from the shadow of the valley of depression, and it looks as if everyone will soon have a job again, and everyone will therefore eat. And, speaking of eating, there is no better way to celebrate Thanksgiving than with a bang-up dinner that will make you feel fit to pop.

Whatever have been your experiences since that fatal fall of 1929 which seemed also the fall of everything else, this is one day in the year when everyone can devote his or her whole time to eating, so we are going to suggest a dinner to fit the occasion. Never mind the decorations this year, if you're still short of funds, but put all your money into food.

Here's the Menu

Fruit Cocktail in Orange (or Apple) Cases
Cream of Carrot Soup
Roast Duckling with Stuffing and Fried Apple Rings or
Roast Turkey with Molded Cranberry Sauce
Whipped Potatoes
Baked Hubbard Squash
Hot Rolls
Home-Made Preserves
Pumpkin and Apple Layer Pie
Coffee
Dates Stuffed with Fondant

And here are the recipes for the dishes in this menu with which you may not be familiar:

Fruit Cocktail in Orange (or Apple) Cases: Cut one banana in cubes, and put it together with the drained contents of one No. 2 can of grapefruit and of one 1-pound can of sliced peaches in eight orange cases, having the peaches swirled around on the top. To make the orange cases, four oranges are required. Remove all the pulp from the cases, and keep them in ice water until needed. Hallowed out red or yellow apples can be used instead. After the fruit is arranged, pour over the chilled syrups from the cans of grapefruit and peaches, mixed with one tablespoon of fresh lime juice and one tablespoon of honey. Serves eight.

Decorative and Delicious

Cream of Carrot Soup: Make a white sauce of four tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, three cups milk and two cups of strained home-made or canned chicken broth. Press three cups of sliced carrots, or the contents of two 8-ounce cans of diced carrots, through a sieve, and add with their liquor. Add one-half cup cream, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve hot in cups, and on top of each one float a small round cracker on which is placed a rosette of whipped cream dusted with paprika. Serves eight.

Pumpkin and Apple Layer Pie: Mix together one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, three-fourths teaspoon ginger and one-half teaspoon salt. Add to one cup of home-cooked or canned pumpkin. Add two well-beaten eggs and one cup scalded milk. Pour into a pie tin lined with pie paste, bake at 450 degrees for ten minutes and then lower the heat to 325 degrees until set, or until a knife, inserted, comes out clean. Cool. Meanwhile soften one and one-half teaspoons gelatin in two tablespoons cold water. Dissolve over hot water and add to one and one-half cups home-cooked or canned apple sauce, with three tablespoons orange marmalade and a few grains of cinnamon. Chill. When it begins to set, spread over the pumpkin pie and chill again. Cover with whipped cream. Serves eight.

An Extra Dessert

And here's an extra dessert to be served where cider can be obtained. It is cool and sweet and satisfying, and takes very little trouble to make.
Cider Frappe: Boil one-half cup sugar and one-fourth cup water to a syrup. Soften one teaspoon gelatin in a little cider, and dissolve in the hot syrup. Cool, add two tablespoons lemon juice and three cups cider, and freeze to a stiff mush. If frozen in refrigerator trays, stir several times or beat with Dover beater. Serves eight.

TINLEY PARK

The floor lamp which was donated by The Public Service Company was won by Thomas McAllister of Orland Park. The Tinley Post wishes to thank everyone who helped to make the bunco and card the big success, which it was.

IN MEMORIAM

VOGT HENRY SR. In loving memory of our dearly beloved husband and father who passed away one year ago Nov. 27, 1932.
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
LOVING WIFE, DAUGHTERS AND SON.

At the last regular meeting of the R. N. A. a surprise party was sprung on the members. After the business bunco was played and popcorn served and all 23 members went home with a prize-declaring that was the best party of all where everyone gets a prize.

The hunters came back with a load of wild geese and that is the reason of the south side of town. Bill Mancke's good luck consisted of 3 geese, combined weight 25 lbs. There were 16 relatives at the supper table Tuesday night who did full justice to the meal and are wondering when he will go again. His brother Walter wasn't left behind either, he got the wild ducks so there will be more good things to eat.

Mrs. Clemens entertained several friends at a waffle luncheon Tuesday evening.

Teacher Training Class Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Children's Hour Saturday afternoon, 2 to 3. In building our program, we have endeavored to consider the needs of every age group. Our Children's Hour cares for little children from 4 to 8. All boys and girls from 9 to 15 are eligible for membership in our bi-monthly Junior Church.

But there is one other thing we must learn. Adults are important. At first it was said: "The Kingdom of God will come in on the feet of little children." Isn't that simple? But everyone knows, if he thinks about it at all, that you can't educate a generation in a vacuum, apart from its elders. It is to meet the felt needs of these, the young people and the adults, that we are planning a series of Church nights. The last Wednesday in every month is to be Church Night. We come together in the church at 7:45 to have Rev. Paul Sanders lead us in a 15 minute devotional period. At 8 o'clock, the group will divide into three study groups, courses to be offered as follows: "Religious Drama and its Use in the Church" by Rev. Guy Jones of Worth.

"Course in New Testament," by Rev. John Mullen. "Principles of Teaching" by Mrs. John Mullen. You are free to make your own choice as to the study you wish to pursue, but once enrolled, it is desired that you abide by your decision. After one hour of study, the groups gather in the church basement for a period of sociability and refreshments.
